ALEXANDER MITCHELL.

As was announced in the Gazette last evening, Alexander Mitchell died suddenly in New York yesterday afternoon of pneumonia. He had been ill but a short time, and was not considered to be in a dangerous condition until a few hours before his death took place. The news, under these circumstances, was a severe shock to the people of Milwaukee. But very few indeed knew that he was sick and the men most intimately connected with him in business little dreamed that the great financier was so close to death's door. The attack of pneumonia was a severe one, and three more years and not much more than the number of his days, it fitted him to make a successful struggle with that disease.

Mr. Mitchell was the wealthiest man in Wisconsin, and was among the richest in the west. He settled in Milwaukee in 1836, when he was twenty years old. He was a poor young man then, but he was industrious and energetic, and it was not long before he made all enterprises succeed that he touched. He became a banker, then president of a railway company and the founder and the controller of an insurance company, all of which gave him a tremendous influence over the trade and commerce of Milwaukee. When he became president of the St. Paul railway system in 1855, it had but little more than 200 miles of track, and was in a bankrupt condition. The touch of his financial genius gave new life to the line, and since that time it has not slackened in its onward speed, and to-day the system of which he has been president for 22 years, has over 5,000 miles of track with fifty-one million dollars worth of stock.

Mr. Mitchell never took very much interest in politics in a way as to make it feel the influence of his money. In his younger days he was a whig, and when the republicans party was organized he became a republican. But he followed President Johnson in his reconstruction scheme in 1865, and a step further took him into the democratic party where he had since remained. He was elected to congress in 1870, and served two terms. The democrats frequently urged him to become their candidate for governor, and in 1870 he was nominated, but he declined to run against Governor William E. Smith. Since then he has had nothing to do with politics, except to contribute a small portion of his large means to the various campaign funds.

While Mr. Mitchell was one of the greatest financiers in the west, he looked in one thing. He established banks, put new life and marvelous success in railroads, inspired trade and made commerce prosper, and erected public buildings which will long stand as a fitting monument to his enterprise and public spirit, but he never builded a home. He had a magnificent place where he lived at times, and the grounds about the building made beautiful with lawns, trees and flowers, but there was no home there to him should have been the dearest spot on earth. He was too exclusive and too retiring to enjoy the comforts of his palace, and all the wealth he possessed could not, or at least did not, buy for him one of the homes that love has built. There are thousands of men in Milwaukee working for a dollar and a half a day, who have been a successful in the founding of a home that Alexander Mitchell who accumulated more than twenty million dollars in the way of a fortune.

It is pretty difficult to determine who will succeed Mr. Mitchell as president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company. The charter of the company expressly provides that the general office of the company shall be located in Wisconsin, and also that the president shall be a resident of the state. The names of John Plankinton, of Milwaukee, and John Lawler, of Prairie du Chien, have been mentioned both being prominent business men and both meeting the requirements of the law. Mr. Lawler is one of the greatest self-made men in this state, and has been a resident of this state since 1840.

In 1880 two little boys named Parib were started from Dry Point, near Montford, for Mineral Point, Wis., in the night with a load of zinc ore. The next morning the wagon was found upset in the cut where the Chicago and Northwestern road crosses the highway, west of Cobb Station, and underneath the load of ore the dead bodies of the boys were found. The father sued the town of Eden for damages and won the suit. The town afterward sued the Chicago & Northwestern company, and obtained a judgment against the latter for the amount necessary to reimburse the town for the amount of judgment and costs it had to pay in the former. The case was appealed to the supreme court which affirmed the judgment. On the 14th inst. the Chicago & Northwestern Co. paid the town $5,255.55 in satisfaction of the judgment.

The Chicago Journal.—A few evenings ago, as the Hon. John Wentworth sat in the area of the Sherman house surrounded by a few of his jovial friends, the conversation turned suddenly on trances. The attentive gentleman had just listened to a recital of how some friend of the narrator's had once been in a trance, and on returning to consciousness had described his pleasurable feelings, his glimpses of paradise and the surpassing loveliness of that realm, while in his hypnotic condition. New York, April 20.—Alexander Mitchell, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, and the richest man in the northwest, died at the Hoffman house, of acute pneumonia, aged 50.

Mr. Mitchell had returned from spending the winter in Florida, where Mrs. Mitchell is now. His death was not a surprise. He had been ill for some time, and the interest in his death was not great. He was taken to Milwaukee in Mr. Mitchell's private car, and the interest in his death was not great. route taken by "Tial Revolo." Alighting at the line, they marched through the town over the route of the British troops, halting at the Massachusetts hotel at 6:15 o'clock.

At 7:30 an old-fashioned breakfast was given to the town-people at the Massachusetts hotel, which was participated in by about 125 people. Rev. Mr. Staple sat at the head of the table, with Judge Harrington—84 years of age—on his right, and John J. Reed—another aged man—upon the left.

This feature in the day's events was characterized by the large attendance of old people, most of whom were direct contributors of the heroes of 1776. In the afternoon a children's entertainment took place in the town hall, followed by a band concert, and in the evening the day's celebration was concluded by a ball.

A SPIRITUALIST EXILED. Clinton, Wis., Gives E. H. Adams Perpetual Walking Papers.

Clinton, Wis., April 20.—Tuesday morning E. H. Adams was made to leave this place to remain away forever. Adams was a noted spiritualist, and edited a paper in that interest called "Clifton from the Sun." He was mobbed last Thursday by about 300 angry citizens, and narrowly escaped with his life. Since then he has been in jail as a security against bodily harm.

The Prisoners Sentenced to the Penitentiary for Life. MONROE, Wis., April 20.—The celebrated Water-Schwartz murder case was given to the jury at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The court's instructions to the jury occupied nearly an hour, and were strongly favorable to the defense. The judge announced that he would receive the verdict any time before 1 o'clock Wednesday morning.

At 5:20 p. m. the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and both prisoners were sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary for life.

DOLLARS AND SENSE!

Are two very good things to have and those who make good use of the latter generally manage to get their share of the former. The sense of saving the cents is pretty generally understood by all, but where and how to save them may not be quite so well and widely known. The morgue of economy and the graveyard of frugality is found in all those stores who ask a few cents more than we do for the purchases of the day.

A SECRET OF MONEY MAKING.

Lies in the solution of the problem of judicious buying; this is accomplished by securing a reliable article at the very lowest price, but where? There is but one "lowest" and once found you may depend upon it that you are on the broad road to riches. Seek until you find it, and in the search don't forget to look us over, for we are making it a point to save at least one cent for every purchaser, no matter how small or trifling the article may be.

AS YOU BUY SO YOU SAVE.

For the larger the article the wider the gap between our figures and the average prices of the day. Try us and you will find we are something to tie to. Our intention is to serve you with the best at a scale of prices mutually beneficial, and at the end of the year we will prove to have leading editorial to the Massachusetts Republican in May 1910. "We may suppose that President Cleveland does desire a renomination and an indorsement," he declared in his letter of acceptance. "But he would wish but one term, but one year, and I am sure that he has expressed substantially the same wish not only have they not refused a reelection, but it has invariably become a wished object of their lives. It may be for granted, then, that President Cleveland will decline the nomination of his party, which he will respond, and he undoubtedly has it in his power to make administration so popular with his party that he can secure a renomination."
